Quantifiers (Page 19)

A quantifier is a word that usually goes before a noun to express the quantity of the object. eg:- a little milk.

There are quantifiers to describe large quantities (a lot, much, many) small quantities (a little, a bit, a few) and undefined quantities (some, any).

eg:- Do you want some milk?
Just a little.

- There are many things to do today.
- We have a lot of time left, don't worry.
- Many people take the train to work.
- She plays a lot of sport.
- She had so much work to do.

Countable and Uncountable nouns

Nouns can be countable or uncountable.

Countable nouns can be counted eg:- an apple, 2 apples, many books etc
Uncountable nouns cannot be counted. We can refer to their quantity. eg:- air, rice etc. a kilo of sugar, half a litre of petrol.

Countable nouns have singular and plural forms while uncountable nouns can be used only in the singular form.

Money is uncountable. Currency is countable. We don't say one money, two money etc. It can be one dollar Hundred rupees. Four pounds etc.

Quantifiers

Countable Nouns	Uncountable Nouns
a, an, the	the
This, that, these, those	this, that none, one, two, three...	none
many	much
a great/large number of	a large amount of few, a few, the few	little, a little, the little fewer ... than	less ... than a lot of	a lot of some	some
any / How many	any / How much

Some / Any

When we want to refer to a plural noun or an uncountable noun without giving a specific quantity. We use 'some' and 'any'. We use 'some' in affirmatives and 'any' in questions and negatives.

eg :- There is some milk. There isn't any milk. Is there any milk? There are some chips. There aren't any chips. Are there any chips?

eg :- We have some free time later this afternoon.
She doesn't want any coffee.
Do they need any bread?
I went to some meetings in Rome last week.
Will there be any managers at the party?

Exception :- When we make requests and offers, we usually use 'some' instead of 'any'. eg :- Can I have some water please?
Would you like some chocolates?

Quantifiers

Enough, Plenty (of)

The words 'enough' and 'plenty' express the idea of being a sufficient quantity. It is used with countable and uncountable nouns. 'Plenty of' means there is more than a sufficient quantity of something.

eg:- I need more plates. No, we don't. There are plenty.
We have got plenty of time.

- We use 'enough' to express the idea of 'having' or not having sufficient quantity

eg:- I think we have enough vegetables
But we don't have enough fruit. Let's get some more

How much / How Many

1) How many people were at the meeting?
2) How many chairs do we need?
3) How much time have you got?
4) How much petrol shall I buy.

Cost of something - How much

1) How much do these oranges cost?
2) How much does this mobile phone cost?
3) How much are those chairs?

correct the errors

Mr Smith is the student of a Cambridge University. He is brilliant and has only a little friends. But these friends are helpful.

Ans :- a, the, a few, those